

List of contributors

Ádám Nagy habil. PhD has various degrees (engineering, economics, political science, education, law, health care), with a habilitation in pedagogy. At this time he is a research professor at the Pallasz Athéné University and an associate professor at the Hans Selye University. He was the founder and editor-in-chief of the periodicals Civil Review and New Youth Review, the president of the Leisure-time Pedagogy Section of the Hungarian Pedagogical Society and the vice president of the Youth Researcher Section of the Hungarian Sociological Association. His research areas include leisure-time pedagogy, youth affairs and the civil society.

Anna Fazekas was born in 1989 in Budapest. She graduated in 2014 with a Master's in Sociology. She was lead researcher at the Excenter Research Centre and currently works as a freelance researcher. Her key research areas include youth sociology, the sociology of leisure, media sociology and social psychology.

Betty Tsakareistou is Assistant Professor and Head of the Advertising and Public Relations Lab at the Department of Communication, Media and Culture at Panteion University. She was a visiting Lecturer at Copenhagen Business School, and has been part of the CCEBI research network (2013-16) and the MBA Programme of the University of Cyprus (2007-11). Her research focuses on the mobile, sharing and collaborative economy and consumption; start-up entrepreneurship and social innovation; and cities as platforms for co-creation and innovation. In 2016, Betty was appointed Branding Officer and European Co-Liaison of the International Communication Division of the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication. The year previously, she received a grant from the US Department of State and participated as a visiting scholar at the Study of the US Institute on Journalism and Media at Ohio University. The same year, she also launched (as editor) a book series on digital culture with Pedion Publishing and co-initiated the Connecting Cities Project, a digital transmedia storytelling initiative for innovative urban public diplomacy, connecting five cities across four continents. She has served on the Board of Directors of the Institute of Communication in Athens since 2002, and is a member of the Advisory Board of Impact Hub Athens. She is also a member for Greece for the COST/European Literacy Network programme (from 2014) and has served as a media literacy expert for the European Commission (from 2010).

Lida Tsene holds a PhD from the Department of Communication, Media and Culture at Panteion University (2010) in the field of social media and social responsibility. Since 2008, she has collaborated with the Advertising and Public Relations Lab of Panteion University as researcher and teaching associate. She worked as adjunct professor at the Department of Informatics and Mass Media of the Technical Educational Institution of Western Greece (2010-2014) and since 2012 has taught the MA Communication and New Journalism at Cyprus Open University as well as (since 2013) the MA Cultural Organizations Management at the Hellenic Open University. She has worked as a journalist and corporate social responsibility and communications consultant, and since 2005 she has been the Public Relations and Educational Programmes Director of Comicdom Press. In 2015, she founded the Athens Comics Library. She has published papers in the field of digital media, journalism, entrepreneurship, comics and creative industries.

Dimitra Iordanoglou is a Lecturer at the Department of Communication, Media and Culture at Panteion University, and a Visiting Lecturer in Human Resources Management at the Athens University of Economics and Business. She has worked as a human resources consultant for many years, and was the scientific co-ordinator of the EU-funded project Young Business Leaders. She is also the author of two books, Human resource management in modern organizations – New trends and practices (2008) and Leaders of the future (2016). Dimitra is a certified coach in Emotional Intelligence and has been awarded a Fulbright grant to conduct research on neuroleadership in the US.

Konstantinos Ioannidis holds a PhD from the Department of Communication, Media and Culture at Panteion University and an MSc from the Business School of the University of Birmingham. He has 10 years of working experience, leading international quantitative and qualitative research projects. For the last five years he has been the Co-ordinator of the Research Lab at the Advertisement and Public Relations Lab at Panteion University. He has participated in many international conferences and has several publications in the field of consumer behaviour and the sharing economy.

Maria Briana holds a PhD from the Department of Communication, Media and Culture at Panteion University. Among her research interests are nation and destination branding as well as collaborative public diplomacy.

Evaldas Rupkus is the EUth project manager for marketing at the International Youth Service of the Federal Republic of Germany (IJAB). He is a consultant and a trainer in the field of youth information and youth policy development, and has been working at the Lithuanian Youth Council (LiJOT), the Eurodesk Executive Committee and the European Youth Information and Counselling Agency (ERYICA).

Kerstin Franzl is a research fellow at the nexus Institute for Co-operation Management and Interdisciplinary Research (Germany) and the co-ordinator of the EUth project. She is specialised in applied social science and participatory research and development as well as in consultancy, planning and the facilitation of public participation.

Daniel Poli has a Master's in Political Science, and is the head of the department of professionalisation and advancement of international youth work at IJAB and a member of the governing board of ERYICA. He has been initiating, developing and leading projects in the areas of recognition of non-formal learning, digitalisation, eParticipation, data security, professionalisation and inclusion in the field of international youth work at federal and international levels.

Jochen Butt-Pośnik is a social scientist and carpenter, as well as project co-ordinator at the Service and Transfer Agency for the Implementation of the EU Youth Strategy at JUGEND für Europa, the German National Agency for Erasmus+ Youth in Action. He has been developing and managing European co-operation projects around youth participation and youth policy, and has been a member of different national and international expert groups on youth participation and youth policy. Jochen is currently involved in the development of the “Ignite the spark” participation labs, a co-operation project of various stakeholders on a European level.

Karima Rhanem is a Moroccan development outreach and communication specialist, and researcher in governance and public policy with over 15 years of experience in youth and civil society programmes. She began her career as a freelance journalist with several national and international print and electronic media outlets. She then worked as Managing Editor of the online English-language paper Morocco Times and was a freelance correspondent with Morocco World News. She also worked as a communications and media specialist with an international development agency in Morocco from 2006 to 2014. She has been involved in youth and NGO empowerment work for the past 15 years and in public diplomacy for the past 6 years.

Adina Marina Călăfăteanu holds a PhD in Political Sciences (Comparative European youth policies in Romania and Turkey) and has extensive expertise in grassroots youth work and youth work methodologies and practices, youth participation methodologies, and inclusion policies. She holds an MA in Comparative European Social Studies (MACESS) from London Metropolitan University, a BA in Political Sciences and a Bachelor's in Social Work from the University of Bucharest. Her research interests are in the field of social policies for young people, structured dialogue and participatory youth structures, youth-led movements, community development, youth social entrepreneurship, corporate social responsibility and social impact, as well as the transfer mechanisms of European policies and programmes to local realities. Since 2013, Adina has been a member of the Pool of European Youth Researchers (PEYR) and an associate teaching assistant at the University of Bucharest.

Manfred Zentner has been conducting research on youth and youth culture since 1997. Since 2001, he has worked in the fields of research and knowledge transfer at the Institute for Youth Culture Research in Vienna. His main topics of research are youth cultures, migration and participation. He is a Lecturer at Danube University Krems and at the University College of Teacher Training in Lower Austria. Manfred was rapporteur for the Council of Europe international review teams for national youth policy in Hungary and Belgium, and is also a member of PEYR.

Nuala Connolly is a researcher and academic specialising in information policy, the sociology of technology, and youth. She is a Postdoctoral Researcher at the UNESCO Child and Family Research Centre, School of Political Science and Sociology, at the National University of Ireland (NUI), Galway. Nuala has extensive experience as a lecturer and researcher, and previously worked at the Department of Applied Social Studies, Maynooth University, and the School of Information and Communication Studies, University College Dublin (UCD). Nuala also holds a PhD (2012) in Information Studies from the UCD School of Information and Communication Studies. She is an appointed member of the Council of Europe and European Commission youth partnership's PEYR. Nuala was on the editorial team of the 2nd European Youth Work Convention, and delivers expert inputs on young people's participation in the digital world at a European level.

Claire McGuinness is Assistant Professor and Director of Undergraduate Programmes at the School of Information and Communication Studies, UCD, where she received her PhD in Library and Information Studies in 2005. A specialist in information and digital literacy, information work, and instructional theory and practice, Claire has published widely; her most recent book, Digital detectives: solving information dilemmas in an online world (with Crystal Fulton), was published in March 2016. Claire has extensive experience in working with undergraduate and graduate students, and has designed and taught multiple information and digital literacy modules over the past decade. Claire is also a founder member of the Literacies Committee of the Library Association of Ireland, and has recently worked on the EU Tempus-funded project, Developing Information Literacy for Lifelong Learning and Knowledge Economy in Western Balkan Countries (2012-2015).

Antonia Wulff has a background in the Organising Bureau of European School Student Unions (OBESSU) and is a former chair of the Council of Europe Advisory Council on Youth. She holds a Master of Science degree in sociology and currently works with international education policy.

Manu Mainil has been actively involved in the Mouvement contre le discours de haine (No Hate Speech Movement) since it was launched in March 2013. Since August 2013, she has been the campaign co-ordinator in French-speaking Belgium, in the International Youth Office. She was one of the creators of the WediActivists board game (an educational tool teaching cyber-citizenship) through which numerous activities and training courses have been arranged for young people and their adult role models. She has also taken part in most of the major No Hate events of the last three years and is involved in several international partnerships via her socio-cultural associations (for example Hate Fighters Network, Creativity Creates Change, Social Justice on Social Media).

Ivett Karvalits has worked in the youth field for 16 years. Her first experience with human rights education came from a youth exchange on anti-racism, anti-Semitism and anti-Gypsism when she was 16. From then on she was always involved in international co-operation programmes related to youth work. She has studied Hungarian language and literature, aesthetics and art management. She worked as a communications and information officer for the youth programme within Hungary's Mobilitás National Youth Service, then was responsible for bilateral co-operation on youth policy development. From 2011, she has been the national co-ordinator of Eurodesk Hungary, a network of youth information professionals within the National Agency of the Erasmus+ Programme hosted by the Tempus Public Foundation. She has been involved in the Hungarian adaptations of Compass, Compasito and Bookmarks and has been the campaign co-ordinator of the Hungarian No Hate Speech Movement since 2013.

Anne Walsh has a Master's degree in Anthropology and has been working for the National Youth Council of Ireland (NYCI) since 2008. Her role at NYCI is to support youth groups and organisations to embed interculturalism, equality and inclusiveness in their work. Anne does this through training, resource development, research, consultation and developing strategic relationships at national level. She also works in an advocacy and policy role representing the needs of young people from minority groups. Anne co-ordinates an Equality and Inclusion Support Network with key staff from national organisations to work strategically to embed inclusive practice in the sector. Anne co-ordinates the No Hate Speech Movement in Ireland for NYCI.

Aleksandra Knežević is Professor of Spanish Language and Hispanic Literatures and has a Master's degree in Librarianship and Informatics, and is currently studying for a PhD on European integration, at the Faculty of Political Sciences at the University of Belgrade. From 2007 to 2016, she was in charge of international co-operation at the Ministry of Youth and Sports of the Republic of Serbia; from 2013, she was the Head of the Group for International Co-operation. She was also the Co-ordinator of the No Hate Speech Movement at national level and vice president of the National Committee from 2013 to 2016. Aleksandra has represented the Republic of Serbia on different bodies of the Council of Europe responsible for youth: the European Steering Committee on Youth and its Bureau, the Programming Committee on Youth, and the Coordination Body of the Partial Agreement on Youth Mobility through the European Youth Card, and even chaired some of these bodies. She has been a member of the NHSM Follow Up Group from 2014. In addition, she has been a representative in many other national and international structures, such as the Erasmus+ Committee and the Working Group on the Presidency of the Republic of Serbia of the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe.